Since we came together in 2007 around one of the Toronto reggae scene's true lions, Friendlyness (Big Sugar, Culture Shock, Truth And Rights), The Human Rights have become one of the most beloved and respected Canadian independent reggae bands. In 2014, our longtime bredren Tréson joined the band to give us a uniquely powerful two-man vocal front line that delivers roots reggae, soul, R&B and dancehall vibes — backed by the propulsive rhythm section of Tyler Wagler (bass) and Eric Woolston (drums), Canadian reggae legend Dave Jackson on keys, two blazing guitarists and the Declaration of Human Rights horn section. By the end of this year, we'll have played over 200 club and festival shows across Canada, and earlier this year we toured the United States for the first time to a fantastic response. We've released three full-length albums, with a fourth on the way in late 2024.

On our most recent album, 2021's Reggae Strong, The Human Rights more than lived up to its title following an extended break since releasing our 2016 self-titled album and the 2018 single "I Need You". Recorded with producer and former band member Patric McGroarty, and mixed and mastered by renowned Canadian reggae artist Dubmatix, Reggae Strong brought The Human Rights to a truly Canadian reggae sound, with guest appearances by Toronto's Ras Yunchie, Caddy Cad, I-Sax, and Carol Brown.

The Human Rights are:

Friendlyness: lead vocals

Tréson: lead vocals

Eric Woolston: drums

Tyler Wagler: bass

James Taylor: guitar

Graham Campbell: guitar

Dave Jackson: keyboards

and the Declaration of Human Rights horn section
